SIDE STORY

The letters are filled with a white, distressed, splattered texture. To the right of the text, a black silhouette of a staircase with a railing is superimposed over the letters. Two figures are shown in dynamic dance poses on the stairs: one figure is in a high kick or leap, and another is in a similar pose below. The entire graphic is set against a solid black background.

Director's Note

I selected the musical for this year because of the message. We all need to look at our "sameness" and not our differences. We need to teach our children respect for each other as human beings. As parents, we all want a better world for our "children". They are our future. The multi-cultural casting in this show allows these "children" in the cast, crew and orchestra to see and live the message on a daily basis. If this performance can move one person to "think" and consider the futility of hatred and violence, our world will be a better place.
